

'Underground Hope' Aims To Help Young People

By LUCILLE HOWARD
Star Staff Writer

A half-way house, soup suppers, a full-time coffee house and a 24-hour telephone service to arrange assistance with personal problems are the ambitious plans of a 23-year-old University of Nebraska student who wants to help young people.

All of the services have been provided on a small scale already, without advertising or adequate accommodations.

Underground Hope, a non-profit corporation started by Roger Frahm, his wife Cherie and friends, has fielded about 15 telephone call per day, provided some food and lodging in private homes and attracted 35-80 customers at the basement coffee house as a result of news spreading "by word of mouth," Frahm reported.

Some 100 persons are on the Underground Hope volunteer staff to provide counseling and assistance to anyone who calls, he said.

Licensed as a probationary Methodist minister, Frahm has served in a few churches, traveled and lived in communal settings and "found my ministry should be out on the streets" dealing primarily with youths.

He is striving to raise $500 to get the coffee house and 24-hour answering service operation moved from his North 27th Street home to a downtown location where Underground Hope will be easily accessible to college students, transients and local youths.

Frahm started the answering service to provide a contact for youths with problems who are hesitant about seeking family or professional help.

Counselors, primarily University of Nebraska students with sociology and psychology training, are personally selected by Frahm and dispatched to meet with persons who want help with problems ranging from family difficulties to drug addiction and venereal disease.

The counselors have discussed the problems with youths and their families and referred them to proper professional people, including doctors, lawyers and psychiatrists, when necessary, Frahm said.

"We can't rectify all problems, but we can usually make people understand the difficulties of others," he pointed out.

Most of the problems are products of an individual's failure to cope with society and his own situation, he said.

While most of the professional services have been contributed so far, Frahm plans to use profits from the coffee house to pay for those that are not.

Customers pay a cover charge for a quiet, folksy — "not psychedelic" — atmosphere, hours of musical entertainment, conversation and hot, spicy cherry cider or calico mushroom coffee — "very strong and very bitter." Open only on weekends in his home, Frahm intends to operate the coffee house daily at the downtown location.

By next summer Underground Hope should have a half-way house ready to occupy, with full-time professional supervision, according to Frahm. Plans are to serve persons addicted to drugs and alcohol or have other problems in adjusting to society, he noted.

At the coffee house-office site, Underground Hope also will offer soup suppers "to keep persons from getting a petit larceny charge on their record for stealing food" and a chapel for personal meditation.

No religious services, "moralizing" on such things as drugs or regular lectures will be a part of the program, the slight, red-haired founder declared.

The Christian atmosphere to be provided, as stated in the articles of incorporation, "means offering understanding and love to everyone who crosses our doorstep," he pointed out.

Underground Hope is not in competition with churches or other community agencies, but merely "taking up" where they leave off," he contended.

Frahm is confident the operation will succeed in its endeavors where others have not because it has counselors "experienced in handling the problems of today's youths," a "phenomenal following" of volunteers without advertising and has become a part of city government as a member of the Lincoln Action Program board of directors.

Mandatory Early Grain Payments In Denney's Bill

Washington — Rep. Robert V. Denney, R-Nebr., brought the complaints of Nebraska's First District farmers to the floor of the House Thursday.

Denney introduced a bill calling for a mandatory advanced payments feed grain program.

"The farmers in my district have been receiving about $26 million in advance payments every February or March to help pay for spring planting," Denney told his colleagues.

"If this money is denied them, they will be forced to borrow at record interest rates. This could cost them approximately a million dollars in interest charge on loans."

Denney said that the cutback was supposedly made to fight inflation.

"In reality, no funds are being cut, but simply pushed into another fiscal year," he said.

"I am not happy with the concessions the administration has made," the Nebraskan admitted. "The farmers are being asked to do more than their share of sacrificing."
